

ANTIOCH IS MAKING EXTENSIVE PLANS FOR ANNUAL POULTRY SHOW

Two-day School and Chick- en Jamboree Are To Be Features

Antioch is all astir over one of the biggest events staged here for some time, the annual poultry exhibition December 19, 20, and 21. Entries are coming in fast and prospects are good.

Advertising space has been grabbed up so rapidly that scarcely any reservations are left. Inasmuch as the show is a community enterprise sponsored by and for the residents of this region, directors have decided that no admission charge will be made.

Prof. Alp To Conduct School

Prof. Alp, poultry specialist of the University of Illinois, will conduct a two-day school here in conjunction with the show, plans having been made for a forenoon and an afternoon session to be held on poultry production and sanitation. Another attraction of the exhibition will be a chicken jamboree, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. At that time chickens will be dropped from the highest point of the high school roof into the crowd below to become the property of those who succeed in catching them.

Fire at Wilmot Burns Room and Hallway

Making investigation into the cause for the smoke she discerned as she entered the front room of her home at Wilmot, Sunday night, Miss Rose Elverman discovered that a store room in the upper part of the house was blazing merrily. Telephone calls to New Münster, Twin Lakes, Wilmot, and Silver Lake brought help in a short time. After burning the store room and part of the upper hallway, the fire was brought under control. The home was insured, but no estimate was placed on the damage.

CITY BRIEFS

Fred Hawkins left Sunday for Elkhart, Miss., where he will spend a short vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Bock were called to Kenosha last night by the serious illness of her father, John Behrens.

Prio. W. C. Petty talked to the members of the Grayslake P. T. A. Tuesday night.

The grade school faculty members attended a meeting at Libertyville Saturday.

H. J. Vos was undergoing an examination at the Burlington Memorial hospital Tuesday and Wednesday. He has been troubled with neuritis, and a tonsillar operation has been advised by physicians. He will not be able to return for a few days due to the fact that a blood test indicated infection in his system.

After an illness of several weeks, A. B. Johnson is able to be out again. Physicians diagnosed the trouble as a blood clot near some nerve center and A. B. was forced to remain almost motionless for many weeks.

Through scholarship and activity points, Glenn Roberts rated the "Azo-Grinders" ball which will be held Friday evening at the Urbana-Lincoln hotel.

"Captain Applejack" Is Presented To Large Crowd

A large and appreciative audience witnessed "Captain Applejack," the senior class play, in the high school auditorium Monday night. It was evident that those who took part were talented as well as trained.

MOTHERS' CLUB MEETING IS WELL ATTENDED

About 35 members were in attendance at the Christmas party given by the members of the local Mothers' club held at the home of Mrs. L. O. Bright Tuesday afternoon. Prior to the brief business session, Miss Verlie Porter, a guest in the Petty home, sang a solo. A Christmas story told in verse form by Mrs. Roy Oraves was one of the features of the afternoon. After the children had recited their places and sung several songs, a delightful lunch was served. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Nasen Sibley January 8.

Xmas Carols Will Be Sung To Antioch Folks Who Give High Sign

In keeping with the pleasant custom of interior home decoration for Christmas many of Antioch's residents are making extensive plans for arranging colored lights in their windows to spread the cheer and hospitality that are so important a part of this season.

If you put a light in one of your front windows Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 18 and 19, you will have the opportunity to listen to a group of the Antioch grade school children sing carols for you. Yes, they will make their round on the north side Wednesday night and on the south side Thursday night, but you needn't look for them at your house unless you give them the high sign.

CRASH PUTS LAKE VILLA DRUNKEN MEN IN HOSPITAL, JAIL

John Egan, Paul Schmidt Collide With John Nellis, Antioch

When their car crashed into a machine driven by John Nellis of Antioch, two men were injured slightly Saturday night in Lake Villa, according to a report made to the sheriff by Deputy Sheriffs William Kelly and Frank Suhadolnik, of the county highway police.

Responsibility for the collision is placed on John Egan and Paul Schmidt, both of Lake Villa. It is reported. Both men had been drinking and Dr. Francis Rollins, of Fox Lake, signed an affidavit that they were intoxicated.

Egan, who was at the wheel of the machine, was in the wrong traffic lane and when he was thrown from the sedan into the road, a vampire motorist struck him and hurled him an approximate distance of 50 feet. He was taken to the county hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from severe cuts about the face and head.

Schmidt, who had a broken nose, was taken to the county jail. The injured were carried into the home of Dr. Benjamin Falch, of Lake Villa, where Dr. Rollins attended them. They promised to pay for damages in the Nellis machine.

Nellis had a warrant issued after the crash charging them with drunk driving.

Social Events Claim The Attention of Club Members

The first mid-winter card party of the season of the Channel Lake Country club was held at the Medinah Athletic club, Chicago, on Friday, December 6th. Thirty-three ladies were present at the luncheon and a delightful repast was served in a private dining room with the card tables set up in an adjoining room. The first prize was won by Mrs. W. W. Ward, the second by Mrs. George Bayard, and the third by a guest, Mrs. Lawrence R. Van Allen.

Among the members present were: Mmes. Smyth, Arms, Cooper, W. S. Mills, Sr., W. S. Mills, Jr., Gorsuch, Gnaedinger, Paulson, Dorrance, Johnson, Lytle, Sandell, Britton, Warriner, Van Pelt, Tankersley, Ward, Juhnke, Phelps, Stevens and Laffin.

By unanimous vote of the members present, it was decided to hold two more winter parties, the last of January and the last of March.

Announce Engagement

Another engagement among the younger set is that of Herbert Van Pelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Van Pelt, 6043 St. Lawrence avenue. The lucky man is Mr. Carl Branson, the assistant professor of geology at the State University of Washington, located in Pullman, Washington.

Miss Almer to Wed December 28
The invitations are out for the marriage of Virginia Helen Almer to J. Scott Arms, which is to take place at the First Methodist church, Maywood, on Saturday, December 28, at half after four o'clock. The bride-to-be is having many affairs being given for her, among them being a luncheon and bridge at the Woman's University club, Chicago, on Wednesday, December 18, the hostesses being Mrs. L. Harry Arms, and Miss Bolter, mother and cousin of the groom-to-be.

HUNDREDS FLEE TO SAFETY AS FLAMES RAGE IN BUILDING

Damage to Libertyville Bank, Theatre, P. O., Bakery $15,000

3 Departments Fight Blaze

Terror stricken and excited when they learned that the First National Bank building in which they were seated was on fire, La Villa theatre patrons and Woodmen members fled breathlessly, but orderly, into the streets of Libertyville in search of safety Friday night. Even though the department there was aided by both the Grayslake and Mundelein departments, the flames raged for several hours, destroying a portion of the roof of the three story brick building. The damage would run close to $15,000, bank officials estimated, water damages being greater than those due to the flames.

Smoldering sparks falling up from a paper chute in which there was fire in the morning is believed to be the cause of the conflagration which raged there in the evening. Edward Schneider, chief of the fire department, was attending the Woodman lodge meeting on the third floor of the structure when he learned of the blaze. He was told of the plight of the building by Mason Slepian, manager of the theatre, who noticed the odor of smoke when he went back stage during an intermission in the play. Twice Schneider was overcome as was Norman Madale.

Crowd Escapes Orderly
Due to the fact that the crowd had left the second floor of the building for the street during the intermission that the blaze was discovered and that the 75 Woodmen, who were attending the session on the third floor, made their way to the street through a curtain of smoke in an orderly fashion, a panic was averted.

Damage Done In P. O., Bakery
The mail in the Libertyville post office was damaged by water and flour and other supplies in the bakery were ruined. The offices in the building, including those of Dr. John Taylor, county coroner; Dr. Golding, and Attorney Ben Miller, were also damaged considerably. Redecoration of the entire building will be necessary, it is reported. The bank, which was the least damaged, opened its doors for business Saturday morning.

An investigation is being launched to determine the origin of the fire which it is thought was caused by a lighted cigarette butt thrown into the paper chute. According to reports the loss is covered by insurance.

Harold Kennedy Is Selected State Fair Champ for Best Report

Announcement was received here yesterday declaring Harold Kennedy, a senior in the Antioch Township High school, the winner of the gold medal presented by the state to the boy living on a farm who wrote the best report after attending the State Fair school in Springfield last August. This honor also entitles Harold to a ten dollar gold piece and affords him the opportunity to attend next year's session of the Fair school. Taking into consideration the fact that over 400 boys competed in the contest, the winning of this medal indicates distinction.

COUNTY VETERINARIAN

IS RE-APPOINTED
County Veterinarian T. P. Gallahue was re-appointed for another year by unanimous vote of the board of supervisors yesterday.

Gallahue addressed the board, citing the record made this year in the fight against tuberculosis in cattle, which has been reduced to two per cent in the county, the lowest in seven years that the regular tubercular examinations have been in effect.

Father of George Bacon, Antioch, Dies At Home in Ringwood

Falling to rally longer than a few hours after he had been stricken with a heart attack, Charles Bacon, 70, died at his home in Ringwood Thursday.

The deceased was born at Tloga, Pennsylvania, June 29, 1859, came with his parents to Illinois in 1862, settling at Keokuk. In 1880 he was united in marriage to Jennie Beatty. The couple moved to Ringwood in March 1890.

Mr. Bacon is survived by his wife, two sons, Delbert, of Crystal Lake; and George, of Antioch; a daughter, Mrs. Malissa Belle Gould, of Elkhart, a sister, Mrs. Malissa Havens, Rankin, Oklahoma; and a brother, Robert of Grant, Iowa; six grandchildren; and six great grandchildren.

The funeral was held at Ringwood Sunday afternoon, Rev. Philip Bohl, Antioch, officiating.

REP. LYONS STRIVES TO SERVE; MAKES VOTING RECORD

House Journal Shows He Voted 100% on All Bills; Leads District

Representative Richard J. Lyons of Mundelein has made a remarkable record during his first term at Springfield. According to the House Journal records of the last session there were 653 votes taken in the house on all matters and Rep. Lyons voted on 579 roll calls. This is the best record of any of the legislators from this district. According to the figures Rep. Lyons voted more times than the majority of members of the house, he was not absent once during the entire session and he voted 100 per cent on all roll calls for attendance of members.

Representative Lyons voted "Yes" or "No" on every bill and not once did he vote "Present but not voting" which many members of the house do in order not to go on record.

Probably Rep. Lyons did not know he had made such a record until the actual voting figures were taken from the House Journal. "It never occurred to me to try for a record," Lyons said. "I was merely doing my level best to serve the people of the district."

Maybe This Man Knows What He Is Talking About

Under date of December 9, a writer who desires to be signed "deputy" has contributed the following for publication in the News:

"An article in your paper signed 'A Farmer', stating we were 'over-deputed', and that a few hundred less in the county would tend to lessen crime, was read with much interest. But why jump onto the deputies? With slot machines running for years, saloons wide open and permits given to sell booze, why not look higher up, Mr. Farmer? More crime and less criminals does not necessarily mean the deputies are wholly to blame." Signed, A deputy.

Rotnour Players Again Please Theatre Goers

"The Little Brown Church in the Vale" is announced as the offering of the Rotnour Players at the Crystal theatre next Tuesday night. Ten players will be seen in the production of this excellent drama. Clever vaudeville artists will entertain between acts.

The usual crowded house greeted the players here Tuesday night when the company presented "Be Yourself", a clever comedy drama with a moral.

W. C. T. U. MEETS WITH MRS. GEORGE BARTLETT

Formulating plans for the coming year's work was the keynote of the W. C. T. U. meeting held at the home of Mrs. George Bartlett Friday. Among those present were: Mrs. Tibbitts, Lake Forest, Lake county president; Mrs. Jennie Miller, Libertyville, county treasurer; Miss Cora White, Grayslake, local president; and Mrs. C. Herschberger, Prairie View, district county director of scientific temperance. Mrs. Bartlett very graciously consented to be director of scientific temperance instruction for the local union. The next meeting will be held January 3, the place to be announced later.

NINETY-THREE OUT OF ONE HUNDRED ARE SPENDTHRIFTS, ANTIOCH BANKER ASSERTS

Banker Advises System and Wisdom in Spending

Advice from those well versed in things financial is always welcomed by those who want to practice thrift. Today the News is indebted to S. Boyer Nelson, cashier of the First National Bank of Antioch, for the very helpful suggestions contained in the accompanying article relating to the family budget plan.

Mr. Nelson is regarded as an expert in finances, and what he has to say is well worth reading.

Budget Plan Has Freed Many From Financial Burden, He Says

BIG BUSINESS OPERATES ON SYSTEMATIC SPENDING PLAN

By S. BOYER NELSON

It has been said that never before have people spent so much money or saved so much. The seeming extravagance is only seeming. The intelligent use of the budget has emancipated many people from financial burdens. They do not ask their income where it went; they tell it where to go. By first setting aside enough for the necessities—food, clothing, shelter, operating, etc., and a definite sum for the security of savings and insurance, they enjoy their recreations, indulge their whims and contribute to their charities without a shadow of worry.

93 Per Cent Spend Unwisely
Statistics show that 93 people out of every 100 are spendthrifts. Just seven per cent save enough to keep them in their old age, and three per cent lose their savings through speculative investments, thus leaving only four per cent who save enough to keep them in their old age. To which class do you belong?

Big Business Uses System

Big business today operates on a budget system. The United States Government has found that its departments function better and at the same time more efficiently under a budget plan. The same methods that are being used by large corporations and our government can also be applied to the expenditure of the family income. Thousands of families who have adopted this system would not be willing to go back to the old haphazard way. But there are still too many folks trying to stretch their incomes, and it can't be done. Unfortunately we can't spend the same money twice or three times—if we could, there would be no need for a budget. We can't "have our cake and eat it too."

The Family Budget

A family budget is an estimate of the family income and expenditure for a given ensuing period, a week, a month or a year, with proposals for maintaining a proper balance between the various types of expenditure. It simply puts the reverse English on expenditures. Instead of spending first and wondering where the family income went, you list what you are going to spend and how you are going to spend it in advance and then abide by your plan. The ideal family budget is one that is worked out by the particular family that is to use it. We all differ somewhat in our ideas of needs and luxuries. A standardized budget does not allow for personal tastes.

We urge every reader to draw up a family budget—make the family income go round. Let the whole family help in making up the budget, and keep track of all expenditures in every division. Make it a sort of family game, and you will find it the most successful and prosperous "game" you ever played.

The Ant and the Grasshopper

The ant worked without play—the grasshopper played without work. One sacrificed the comforts of life in a miserly way, and the other came to grief because he did not save and plan for the winter that was sure to come. They should both have been on a budget. We are told to go to the ant, learn of his ways, and be wise. Many have done so, and even wiser than the ant, they have also taken a lesson from the grasshopper (who after all did have a wonderful time—while it lasted). There is a sense of play in most of us which should find a normal outlet, and not be suppressed by money worries. The budget takes into consideration our need for recreation, and anyone who faithfully adheres to the budget that is best suited to his needs will have the greatest freedom to really enjoy life.

In order to formulate your family budget, turn to page one of the magazine section where you will find many helpful ideas on family budgeting.

MRS. SAM STRAGHN IS SURPRISED ON BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Sam Straghn was very pleasantly surprised by a group of her friends Friday evening, the occasion being her birthday anniversary. Following dinner a social time was enjoyed by all.

Business Club Members Meet at Depner's Cafe

Formulation of plans relative to Ladies' night was the keynote of the meeting of the Antioch Business club meeting held at Depner's cafe Monday night. A committee consisting of George Schlosser, chairman, Otto Klass and L. O. Bright was appointed by the president to have charge of the next meeting, the tentative time for which has been set for the first week in January. The committee members named for February 6th meeting are: S. Boyer Nelson, W. I. Scott, and O. E. Hachmeister, while those who will have charge of the play to be given by the club some time this winter are Geo. Schlosser, H. B. Gaston, and John Nixon. Because of the small number in attendance due to counter attractions, no further business was transacted.

Local Future Farmers Place High In Contest

Scoring a triumph for themselves as well as for their school, nine Antioch Township High school fellows placed second in the grain and third in the poultry judging contests held at DeKalb Friday.

Competing with fifteen other schools of Northwestern Illinois, the first five teams were awarded ribbons in each of the three divisions. Geo. Dunford marked second highest in the group of forty-eight boys in judging grain and Ward Edwards placed fourth, while Howard Mastns ranked third in the group of 48 boys judging poultry. He scored 190 points out of a possible 200 and was only surpassed by two boys, who were credited with scores of 192 and 195 respectively.

The local boys, together with their instructor, C. L. Kuttli, of the Department of Vocational Agriculture, made the trip with cars, leaving Antioch at 6:15 a. m.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEMBERS TO HAVE XMAS PARTY

Group of friends
Mrs. A. W. Bock entertained at Five Hundred at her home Friday evening in honor of 18 of her friends, first prizes going to Mrs. Vincent Dupre and Dr. Beebe and second to Mrs. Matt Stahl and Chase Webb. Delightful refreshments were served.

MISS BOCH, MILLBURN, WEDS CHICAGO MAN

Of interest to many Antiochians will be the announcement of the marriage of Miss Hazel Boch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Boch, Millburn, to Arthur McBratney, Chicago.

The marriage was solemnized at a pretty ceremony performed at the home of the bride's parents Saturday evening by Rev. Ralph Harris, Oak Park. The couple was attended by Miss Vera Boch, sister of the bride, and Frank McBratney, brother of the groom.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Messrs. and Mmes George W. Dodge, Ralph Dodge and son, and John Schussler and daughter, and Rev. and Mrs. Harris, all of Oak Park; Messrs. and Mmes L. H. HOMELAND—TWO KINDS

An Antioch man who has been the victim of petty thievery has asked the editor of the News to write an editorial about the practice that has been all too common in this town. Local talent? Of course it was. Regular he-man thieves do not attend home talent plays to ply their trade by stripping cars of parts they can remove. Several car owners were victims of this kind of thievery last Monday night at the high school where the senior class play was presented.

Seems there is nothing to be said on the subject. Stealing is just as wrong today as it ever was, and if we have discovered we have thieves among us, the next best thing to do is to set the trap, spring it upon the first one caught and make a community example of him.

Floodlights of parking spaces would help to eliminate the evil, and until suitable lighting could be installed, the public would not be asking too much to demand police protection for their property.

THE SMALL TOWN'S OPPORTUNITY

Aided by a comprehensive city building plan, the small community has a better opportunity for sane growth and healthful living than the metropolitan centers.

One of the main features of a "comprehensive plan" must be a street system that provides for future growth. In many small American cities and towns streets are narrow and poorly surfaced. Few of them can be used as through routes. Upkeep is costly and a continual drain on the city's finances.

The small town has the advantage of being able to correct deficiencies in its street system without exorbitant expense. By beginning now it can avoid pitfalls of traffic congestion that are an apparently insoluble problem to many of our great centers of population. By using low cost paving materials it can, at a reasonable figure, salvage old streets and secure maximum service from them at a minimum of upkeep expense.

Antioch, handicapped for years because all traffic north and south must pass over a single street, is no nearer a solution of the problem today than it was five years ago. Cook county has widened highways, including Milwaukee avenue (Route 21), and Lake county is also taking up the work of widening roads to relieve congested traffic conditions. How about the time when the route is widened to the bottleneck at Antioch. If that time ever comes? Or will the route take some other course in order to avoid congestion in this town, a condition that is allowed to exist because no steps are taken to correct it? The plan of putting two additional streets through Antioch parallel to 21 has been offered as a solution of the traffic problem, and would be considered a wise measure by those who look into the future.

The cities of the future are the small towns of today. They should begin now to provide for their development.

THE SCHOOL OF EXPERIENCE

Stock market quotations have ceased, at least for the present, to have any meaning or value in measuring the worth of a corporate stock, according to Richard H. Scott, President of the Reo Motor Car Company. He says that until the market value of securities is predicted upon a safer and more intelligent study of the actual worth of securities, it will continue to be a hazardous guide and counselor for persons of moderate means.

The public has been advised time and again by industrial and financial leaders to use caution in their investments, to get advice from legitimate banking and brokerage houses, to refrain from trading on narrow margins and to steer clear of "tips" and "can't lose" market advice. There is nothing fundamentally wrong with American industry and it is certainly essential that its securities be purchased by the public. But it is not necessary to buy securities without rhyme or reason as one would play a roulette wheel.

THE HOME NEWSPAPER

It has been said that no institution not founded on a human need can live. The reversion of this is also true. This is why the home newspaper as an institution has survived many things—the onslaught of individual opposition, the increase of paper and printing costs, the peril of unpaid subscriptions, the uncertainty of advertising patronage, the problem of its professional competition, and the hazards of its own mistakes. Through all these the home newspaper will live.

When subjected to the test of whether the home newspaper could be done without, there always follows the inevitable reaction of whether the people of the community want to be without it. The more than 17,000 daily, weekly, semi-weekly, and tri-weekly newspapers of the United States and Canada stand as proof of the important service the newspaper renders in its local field of circulation.

The newspaper is not an invention nor is it a fad or a fancy. It is a growth—one which is made possible through the co-operative spirit of the home town people themselves, because they want the news that it brings.

COMMUNITY PROGRESS

While Antioch has much to boast of as it considers past achievements, it would be sheer folly at this stage of its community development to rest content with past laurels and cease striving for further advancement.

Antioch's present high standing among centers of equal population has been won by foresight and aggressive policies in the past. This generation should be just as eager to assure an enviable future for the community as were those men of former generations who often fought a stiff, uphill fight to gain those things upon which the city's present prestige rests.

Never before in its history has Antioch been in such good position to go forward in rapid and substantial development as right now. It has all its pristine attractions plus many of relatively recent acquisition.

But to do the things that must be done if the community is to progress along desirable lines of commercial, industrial and residential expansion and betterment, there must be no diminution of that spirit of co-operation and willing effort on the part of a considerable number of citizens which has been manifested in all its past accomplishments.

And just as men and women of vision and civic consciousness have always been available in the past, so will they come to the service of the community in future hours of need.

THE CHANGING AGRICULTURAL CIVILIZATION

The greatest industrial movement now underway is probably farm electrification of a nationwide basis. A comparatively few years ago farm electrification was an attractive theory. Experimental farms were set up. Problems of cost and upkeep were solved. Intensive tests were conducted to show the progressive farmer that with electricity he could do his work more efficiently, in less time and at a lower cost.

Now there are over half a million electrified farms in the United States, an advance of 200 per cent in five years. The rate of increase steadily gains. In zones within reach of central power station service lines are being built as fast as circumstances permit. In other more isolated areas a vast number of individual power plants are coming into use.

In the beginning farm electrification was only considered in terms of light. It has been found, however, that lighting is but one of the potentialities—the greatest field for farm power lies in its application to machinery. According to a recent survey, a steadily increasing number of farms are using great quantities of power—from three to 20 thousand kilowatt hours a year.

Good roads and the automobile have given the farmer physical contact with the outside world. The radio and telephone have given him communication. Electricity is the one other agency needed to raise farm life to standards of modern urban life.

The great agricultural revolution has started. We are approaching a new era in the development of rural civilization with the farm and farm home on a higher social and commercial level than it has ever been before.

BUSINESS MUST GROW

There is a good deal of loose talk flying around concerning the effect of the recent stock market slump on American business.

Though thousands of persons have lost money in the recent slump in stock prices, they are not suddenly going to give up their mode of living and accept a substantially lowered standard, so long as their jobs are safe. And the latest government report on employment, showing that it is down only about 2.5 per cent from September and still well above last year—does that indicate that these jobs are yet in any great danger?

Business may be affected to some extent. But there are millions of persons who own outright the securities of basic industries, bought on expert advice. They have little to worry about for the wheels of industry will keep turning and normal profits and dividends should be paid as in the past.

In the meantime business will grow and new millions will be invested in its securities by persons who seek the advice of reputable bankers and brokers.

MAKING TELEPHONE HISTORY

Both in actual number of telephones and in proportion to the population, the United States leads all other countries, with 20,000,000 of the world's 34,000,000 instruments.

Americans make from 5 to 15 times as much use of the telephone as do Europeans.

Europe is striving to equal us and, in time, may succeed. When that day comes this world will be joined together by a network of wires that will permit any person to speak to any other person in any place in the world, at a low cost and with a minimum of delay.

IN MEMORIAM

Albert and Albertina Krahn in sad, but loving memory of my dearly beloved parents, Father, who passed from this life December 1, 1926; and Mother, who died December 5, of the same year. Happy was our home when we were all together;

Lonely is my heart today. For you parents I loved so dearly have forever passed away.

God knows my silent heartache; God knows I have lost, I can tell; God knows my love for you, dear father, and mother;

God knows that I have loved you so well.

Your loving daughter,

The icy streets and sidewalks the last couple of days were responsible for many an acrobatic stunt being performed in Antioch. It was tough on drivers.

A poor little carnivorous quadruped came wandering into the News office yesterday morning announcing in its own vernacular, "I'm hungry; I'm cold". The force took pity on it and allowed it to stand on the register after the furnace had been stoked. Have a heart, folks; if you can't afford to feed your cat, give it the third degree and be done with it.

About the easiest car to pass on an Antioch road and in fact on any kind of a road is one showing a silhouette in the rear window of a maid and a youth synchronizing their heart beats.

This business of always expecting Antioch to be generous even to the point of folly is vastly overworked. Surrounding towns are always ready to take advantage of any unavoidable slips made by us. Don't shed any crocodile tears over other towns; they don't shed any over our misfortunes.

HintsChristmas Cheer For Busy Housewives

The days preceding Christmas are the busiest of the year, no matter how carefully you may have planned to do all Christmas shopping "early". There are entertainments and parties to attend, packages to wrap and mail, special letters to write, a Christmas tree to trim, and seemingly a hundred and one other things to be done.

All this leaves little time for the prosaic business of serving three meals a day, and if one is not careful the menus may be allowed to become too sketchy. On busy days, a shelf that is well-stocked with nourishing cream soups and such ready-to-serve luncheon and supper dishes as oven-baked beans and spaghetti with tomato sauce, stands in good stead. These, together with a variety of delicious relishes, form the basis for numerous well-balanced, quickly-prepared meals.

Following are several menus that will suggest to you the type of nourishing, satisfying foods that may be served during the next few weeks with a minimum expenditure of time and energy:

Sally Ann's

at Her Home.

Who do you suppose gave a Christmas party for Sally Ann last night, boys and girls? Well, it was Mother Goose—just think of it! Wouldn't you like to have Mother Goose give you a party? Maybe she will if you'll be nice boys and girls.

Who do you suppose was there? You'd never guess—there was Cinderella, Jack, the Giant-Killer, Jack Horner, Little Boy Blue, the Funny Old Woman who lived in a Shoe, Little Miss Muffet, Red-Ridinghood, hood, the Babes in the Woods, and Jolly King Cole, and Jack and Jill!

When all had assembled, they heard a chiming of bells in the distance and then it wasn't long before Santa Claus appeared in his big sleigh that fairly glittered. When the children had all gathered around him, he gave a beautiful gift to each one. And oh, they were all as happy as kings! Would you like to know what each one of them got?

The Babes in the Woods got new winter suits; Cinderella, some nice high rubber boots; Boy Blue, a new bed, with a white and blue spread; Jack Horner, a silver pie-knife; Jack and Jill, a sled with pretty shining steel runners; Jack, the Giant-Killer, a bushel of bones; the Funny Old Woman who lived in a Shoe, a new cook book; Little Miss Muffet, some animal cookies; Red-Ridinghood, a new hood, and Old King Cole, a new crown.

After Santa Claus had distributed the presents, he jumped into his sled and drove swiftly away, calling, "Merry Christmas, Merry Christmas!"

An Easy Way To Prepare Your Christmas Dinner

Tucked away in a corner of our hearts all of us carry over the holiday spirit from one December to the next—and no other day in the year seems quite like Christmas.

Gifts and a tree are important parts of the celebration, of course; but Christmas essentially is the day for a big, old-fashioned family dinner. Women today are fortunate that a large part of these meals can be prepared in the modern way—by someone outside of the home. Soups, relishes, preserves, mince meat and old-time plum and fig puddings may be purchased ready to use. With their aid, any hostess can serve a savory dinner without those endless days of preparation that were necessary in grandmother's time.

To decorate the dining room, hang holly about the walls, lights and pictures. A bowl of fruit with sprigs of holly stuck in it makes an attractive centerpiece for the table. Bits of holly tied with red ribbon may be put at each place, too.

Try these for the menu:

Creamed Brussels Sprouts

Poinsettia Cake

½ cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 3 eggs yolks, ½ cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups flour, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, 2 egg whites, ¼ cup walnut meats, broken in pieces.

Cream butter and sugar thoroughly. Add egg yolks and continue creaming. Add alternately ½ cup milk and 1½ cups flour sifted with 2½ teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Add ¾ cup nut meats, and bake in an oblong shallow pan. Cover with creamy frosting.

Creamy Frosting

Cook together slowly, without stirring, 2 cups granulated sugar, ½ cup cold water, and ½ teaspoon pure elder vinegar, (vinegar always helps to keep frostings fine grained and creamy). When dropped from the tip of a spoon, the syrup forms a long thin thread, that does not shrink and is without bubbles, remove from fire and pour slowly over two stiffly beaten egg whites, stirring constantly. Beat until creamy and spread over cake. With a cord which has been dipped in cold water, mark the

Home Talent Cast
Will Present Drama—
"Old Fashioned Mother"

The spoken drama is offered Antioch people on next week's amusement program.

The first presentation will be that of "An Old Fashioned Mother", a three act drama, to be given at the Antioch high school auditorium by an all home talent cast. The play is one of laughter and tears, depicting a real old fashioned mother, deserted by her children until she is forced to seek refuge in the poor house. As she prepares to make the journey 'over the hills' something happens that changes everything—but really the drama must be seen to be appreciated. Plenty of good, clean comedy enlivens the acts. The old fashioned costumes and stage settings will add to the enjoyment of all who see the production.

The play is sponsored by the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church. Admission price to all will be 50 cents on Monday night. The dress rehearsal is to be Saturday night for children who will be admitted for 10 cents. Each performance starts promptly at 8:15.

"INSCHOOL DAYS"

Antioch Cagers
Ready for Tilt
With Heights

Following weeks of strenuous practice sessions, the Antioch High school basketball fellows are making ready for one of the big games of the season, the opening conference tilt, to be played with the strong Arlington Heights team on the local floor Friday, the thirteenth.

Upholding its rep for being a whizz at the art, it was one of the two teams that administered a defeat to Antioch in the final game of the season last year. Although the lineup for the Antioch team has not as yet been decided upon, the routers are quite confident that Coach Reed will form a winning aggregation with a nucleus comprised of Cremin, Mastine, and McNeil; the remaining positions will probably be filled with the dozen or so good prospects who are fighting for a chance in the lineup.

All of the possible candidates are small, but nevertheless, they are considered speedy.

Arrangements have been completed for several added attractions to be featured at this game: music, dancing, and drills form the amusement between halves; interclass basketball will be played by several of the girls' teams prior to the tilt; the fellows will be all dressed up in their new green suits, which have the newly adopted Sequoia emblems on the chests, and last, but not least, the new school song, "Antioch Fights On", the words and music of which were composed by Coach Reed, will be sung for the first time.

The tournament interclass standing is as follows:

Fresh-Senior Coaches	L	W	Pc
Cremin (Wildcats)	1	1	500
McNeil (Bears)	1	0	000
Mastine (Riveters)	1	0	000
South-Junior Coaches
Brogan (Undertakers)	1	1	500
King (Basketmakers)	0	1	1000
Fuchs (Kinkey Dinks)	0	1	1000

During the school year Antioch pupils and students are given several opportunities to either smile or shed tears. Those who smiled the last time the reports were given out are as follows:

"KONJOLA IS THE ONLY MEDICINE," THIS MAN SAYS

New Remedy Only One That Relieved Him Of Rheumatism And Kidney Trouble

MR. H. W. BECKMANN
"Konjola is the best medicine I know of," said Mr. H. W. Beckmann, Route 2, New Boston, "I suffered for years with rheumatism and kidney troubles. The pains settled in my arms, shoulders and fingers and were so bad that it was impossible for me to sleep at night. Back pains from my kidneys added to my misery. Bladder weakness made night rising necessary. I was worn out and discouraged."

"I had read and heard many good reports about Konjola. My system improved almost from the beginning of the treatment, and after I had taken four bottles of this new medicine my ailments began to disappear. Rheumatism gradually left me and the back and shoulder pains were no longer present. My kidneys improved and the back pains bothered me no longer. Night risings are not necessary now and my general health is better than in years."

Konjola is sold in Antioch at S. H. Reeves' drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

ANTIOCH, ILLINOIS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1929.

NO. 18.

THE FAMILY BUDGET

This outline divides the family budget expenditures and savings into twelve general heads. With the great variation of home and living conditions, no attempt has been made to establish either amounts or percentages for these various divisions. Each of these twelve divisions, however, is a necessary part of the well-balanced expenditure of the family income. A careful check-up of living expenses with this outline should enable any family to develop a family budget to fit their needs.

Keeping a budget will repay all the time and attention given to it. You will find it not only interesting but profitable. When kept over a period of months it provides an excellent basis for future planning.

1. FOOD—Food should consist of a balanced diet suited to the needs of the various members of the family and to the seasons of the year. It will include: Meat and fish, dairy products, groceries, vegetables, bread, fruit, business man's lunches, etc.
2. SHELTER—A home should be roomy, light, airy, sanitary, comfortable and attractive; with running water, toilet and bath, lighting and heating, and refrigeration. The home should be at least 15 feet from neighboring houses. The yard should have walks, a grass plot, shrubs and flowers; and a garage for the family car. The home whether owned or rented bears such expenses as: Home Building payments, Rent, Taxes, etc.
3. OPERATING—Under this heading should come such expenditures as: Fuel, ice, laundry, telephone, water, cleaning. It should also include service equipment and supplies, decorating, paper hanging, plumbing, repair and sundry other expenditures for maintenance and upkeep.
4. CLOTHING—Wearing apparel for all members of the family should be suitable in style and comfort for the four seasons of the year. Clothes and shoes should be systematically purchased for work, dress and sport.
5. FURNISHINGS—The home furnishings should be acquired for a four-fold purpose—comfort, service, health and attractiveness. Under this heading come all house furnishings items such as rugs, carpets, furniture, curtains, drapes, beds, stoves, cooking utensils, etc.
6. SAVINGS AND INVESTMENT—Every family should save. Saving represents security against the needs of the future. Under this head are such items as bank savings and accounts, securities, real estate, building and loan, etc.
7. RECREATION—Such as lodge and club dues, moving pictures, theatre, sports and sporting equipment, amusements, vacations, travel, music, radio, musical instruments, children's toys, etc.
8. EDUCATION AND ADVANCEMENT—Including schooling for children; newspapers, magazines and books, lectures, special vocational training such as business college, night school, correspondence courses, musical training, etc.
9. HEALTH—Including such items as must be expended for such services as medical attendance, dental services, hospital care, drug sundries, etc.
10. INSURANCE—Such as life, sickness, accident, fire, burglary and automobile insurance, etc.
11. PERSONAL EXPENSES—Incidental items of personal expense, such as jewelry, gifts, cosmetics, barber, tobacco, candy, confectionery, flowers, etc.
12. CHURCH AND BENEVOLENCES—Including church subscriptions and collections; charity, such as Red Cross, etc.

Softening Toward Him
Representative James M. Beck said at a dinner:
"If they had kept me out much longer I'd have felt as bad as Brownlow."
"Brownlow was running for mayor, and one night at the end of a stormy meeting his campaign manager said:
"You're winning them over, Brownlow. They seemed more inclined to listen tonight. Yes, you're getting more popular all the time."
"Popular?" started Brownlow. "Look at my coat and vest. Why, they did nothing but bombast me with rotten eggs."
"Yes, but," said the manager, "don't you remember, Brownlow, how it used to be bricks?"

SYNOPSIS

In New York, Hugh Chesby, English World war veteran, relates a story of a treasure in Constantinople in the existence of which his uncle, Lord Chesby, firmly believes. A cablegram notifies Hugh of his uncle's sailing for New York. At the dock Hugh and his chum, Jack Nash, learn from Watkins, Lord Chesby's valet, that the old gentleman has left with a stranger, purporting to be a friend of Hugh. A mysterious telephone message notifies Hugh that his uncle is in a hospital, dying, victim of an assassin. Before his death he has hidden the treasure, and tells them he was stabbed by "Tou-tou." With Lord Chesby's body, Hugh and Jack sail for England. In London Hugh and Jack meet their war buddy, Nikka Zarekko, famous gypsy violinist, and pore over some old documents seemingly having a bearing on the treasure and its location. A hidden room, referred to as the "Prin's Vent," is frequently mentioned. Monty Hillyer, man of shady reputation, but owner of a neighboring estate, calls on Hugh with a party of friends, mostly foreigners. Conversation turns on the "Prin's Vent." That night Jack awakens to find three men in the library. A fight ensues, in which one man is killed. Jack is certain one of the men is "Tou-tou." Jack and his friends find the hidden room, and in it documents telling that the treasure is located in the palace of the Bucoleon in Constantinople. Jack Nash's cousin, Betty King, with her uncle, is in Constantinople, and Hugh, Nikka, Jack, and Watkins set out for the Turkish capital. On the way Tou-tou and a female accomplice kidnap Jack in an effort to learn from him where the treasure is concealed. They fail.

"You go to the Pera Palace hotel. Meet Miss King and her father, but don't let anybody suspect that you expected to meet them. Remember, you will be watched all the time. You must have Miss King hide the copy of the instructions you sent her. Not in her trunk—ah, I have it! Let her place it in the envelope, addressed to herself, Poste restante. She can go to the post office and collect it whenever we need it. You and Watkins will not be in any danger. Tonton's people will be too busy trying to find Jack and me."

"But how are we going to get in touch with you?" asked Hugh.
"Leave that to us," replied Nikka, with his quiet grin. "Make it a custom to lounge in front of the Pera Palace every morning after breakfast for half an hour; and keep a watch out for gypsies. Some morning two especially disreputable fellows will come by, and one of them will contrive to get a word with you. Follow them."

"That's a corking plan," Hugh approved warmly.
If we were followed in Marseilles, we didn't know it. We only left the railroad station to get breakfast and dispatched a telegram from Nikka to his uncle—or, rather, to an address in Seres which acted as a clearing house for the operations of this particular gypsy band.

At Piræus we had a choice of several steamers sailing for Constantinople. Nikka pitched upon a French boat that lay across the wharf from a Greek liner plying to Salonika and the Greek islands of the Aegean. The Frenchman was sailing at dawn the next morning; the Salonika boat was due to cast off several hours later.

We booked two cabins on the Frenchman, and hired a clerk at the British consulate to reserve passage for two on the Salonika boat. This arrangement made, we ministered our scanty baggage, and hurried the Frenchman just before dinner time. We dined together ostentatiously in the saloon, and after dinner, with many yawns and protestations of weariness, we betook ourselves to bed.

Our cabins were next to each other, and as a matter of fact, we played poker until long past midnight. Then Nikka and I said good-by to Hugh and Watly, and sneaked out into the companionway. Several sleepy stewards eyed us, but there were no passengers about. The quartermaster on guard at the gangway we hunted a Napoleon, telling him we were obliged to land in order to dispose of some forgotten business. The watchman on the pier was conciliated in the same way. And finally, the deck-guard of the Greek liner, once his fingers were greased, and our tickets shown to him, offered no objection to escorting us to our cabin.

compartment, which had room for six and must accommodate eight. The second and third-class cars were jammed to the doors. Women wept, children howled and men swore, and struck each other and their women indiscriminately.

That was a dreadful journey, not long as regards distance, but tediously protracted in time. But the engine tolled on, and in the full tide of hours we crawled over a mountain-ridge and saw the sun rising in the east beyond the close-packed roofs of Seres.

Nikka commandeered a bare in the station-square.

"Do you know the house of Kostahidjan the money-lender?" he asked the driver in Greek that sounded more than passable to me. "Very well, then, drive us there."

"Who is Kostahidjan?" I inquired as the driver whipped up his horses.

A door, secretly look had settled on Nikka's face in the last two days. His eyes narrowed, and their gaze was fixed upon the far horizon when they were not shrewdly surveying the appearances of the people around him.

"He is the agent of the tribe," he replied shortly. "It was through him I sent word to my uncle."

I held my peace after that. At last we stopped at a gateway overhung by olive trees, and the driver got down to pull the bell-wire which protruded from an opening by the gate. The solemn clangor echoed faintly, and was succeeded by shuffling footsteps. A wicket opened, and a dark, bowlikened face was revealed. Nikka ejaculated a single sentence in the gypsy dialect that Tonton's gang sometimes used, and the gate swung ajar. I gave the driver of the hacre a couple of drachmas, and followed Nikka inside.

The individual with the whiskers, a dried-up, elderly man, quickly fastened the gate again, with a sideways look at Nikka, half respect, half fear. At the door, he stood aside and ushered us into a parlor furnished in the French style. A stout, smooth-faced, elderly man rose from a desk as we entered. He started to saloon, thought better of it, and offered his hand. Then he commenced to speak in the Tziganic dialect, and Nikka cut him off.

"Speak French," said Nikka curtly. "I have no secrets from my friend, Mr. Nash." And to me: "This is Monsieur Kostahidjan."

Kostahidjan—he was an Armenian of uncertain parentage, I afterward discovered, with the ingrained servility pointed into that unfortunate race by centuries of oppression—drew up chairs for us.

"Your telegram was forwarded at once to the Chief," he said to Nikka. "That Wasso Mikall sent back word yesterday that he would be delayed in waiting upon you in consequence of a caravan of carriages which the band are running into Albania. It is an affair which has attracted his attention for the past month, and he dares not trust the work to another."

"When will he be here?"

"He spoke of tomorrow."

"Then serve us food, and lead us to a room where we may rest."

The Armenian clapped his hands, and the old man with the whiskers—who was dumb in consequence of having had his tongue cut out in one of the Turkish massacres of the red past—returned and carried word in his own fashion of our wants to the kitchen. Presently we sat down in the dining room to a hot meal of pilaf, with chicken, dough cakes and coffee, which Kostahidjan pressed upon us officiously.

Nikka sat through the meal with a black frown on his face. I was secretly amazed by the constantly growing change in his manner, for he was normally of a uniformly pleasant disposition. But it was not until we had been shown to a bedroom on the upper floor that he unmasked his feelings. I began to nod, but he paced the floor restlessly from wall to wall. Suddenly he turned on me:

"Jack, I hope I haven't insulted you in the past twenty-four hours."

"I'm not aware of it, if you have," I returned cheerfully.

"I'm having a h—l of a time," he croaked. "The two sells in me are wrenching at my soul. There's Nikka, the gypsy freemason, who has been dead for years, and against him fights Nikka, the artist and the man of the town. Neither of them owns me. Until the other day—except now and then when the old self reared his head temporarily—I had thought I had thrust the gypsy behind me. But I was a fool to think so, Jack. God, what a fool! Why, the music in me always was gypsy!"

"My people are not like Tonton's gang. They are gypsies. They live by their own hands, and every man's hand is against them. They make their own laws, and abide by their own customs. They take what they need, and consider 't' their due. I tell you this because I don't want to let false colors with you. I lived that life when I was a boy. But I should like to make you understand that in some way, by some esoteric, involved, well-nigh impenetrable process of psychology, it is not stealing in the sense that Tonton steals. My people have been outcasts for centuries; they have been bred up in this way of life. It isn't wrong in their eyes. Put it that way, Jack, I can see it both ways, Jack. I can see how wrong it is, and I can see how right it seems to them."

"You don't need to say all this to me," I told him. "Why, Nikka, it's—"

"It's what? Hard to understand?"

"Easy to understand," I corrected. "Hard to phrase. But I know you too well to worry about you. As for the wrench, I'm beginning to feel it myself."

Nikka resumed his restless pacing. "I don't mind anything so much as that oily Armenian downstairs," he insisted. "He—he is dishonest. And we make him dishonest. Not that I've used him so, Jack. Most of what I earn goes to my people, who need it, poor souls, especially since the war laid its blight on all southeastern Europe. Kostahidjan is one of the agents I employ to distribute my funds. I use him because of his connection with my uncle's tribe."

"Most of us have to use dishonest helpers occasionally," I said. "But can we trust this man, Nikka? If he's all you indicate, isn't he likely to sell us out?"

"He'll sell us in a minute, if he dared," rejoined Nikka, with a tight-lipped smile. "But he knows that if he did he would get a knife in him. It would only be a question of time."

"Nice company you've dragged me into," I grumbled. "Well, let's catch up on our sleep."

His outburst had eased Nikka's nervous tension, and he soon dozed off. For a while I watched the afternoon sunlight outside the window, then the weariness of our travels overcame me, and I too, slept. . . . I woke abruptly, feeling a light blazing in my eyes.

A man was standing in the doorway of the room, with a kerosene lamp in his hand, a tall man, with the proud face of an eagle. Wisps of silver-white hair escaped from the varicolored turban that wrapped his brows, but he held himself with the erect posture of youth. He was dressed in light breeches of brown cloth, and a blue shirt and short red jacket. Around his waist was twisted a heavy sash, bristling with knives and pistols.

As I prodded Nikka awake, he closed the door behind him and set the lamp on a table. Nikka, rubbing the sleep from his eyes, took one look at the apparition and leaped from the bed.

"Wassol!" he cried.

The stranger raised fingers to lips and breast in a graceful salutation, and replied in the gypsy patois, a cadenced, musical speech when used by those to whom it was a mother-tongue. Nikka grasped his hand, and exchanged a rapid-fire of question and answer, then called to me:

"This is my uncle. He arrived sooner than he expected. He guessed my need was great, and traveled without respite. Come and meet him."

The old gypsy sank to his haunches on the bare floor, with a sweeping gesture of invitation to both of us to join him.

"No, no," exclaimed Nikka as I started for a chair. "He has never sat on a chair in his life. Do as he does or he will think you are trying to demonstrate how different you are."

So I crouched cross-legged beside them—it seemed to be easy enough for Nikka to resume the ways of his boyhood—and concurred my discomfort as silently as I could. It was close to midnight when we were awakened, and the talk with Wasso Mikall lasted for several hours. First, Nikka explained to him the circumstances of our trip to Constantinople, and the old man's eyes glinted at the mention of the treasure. He interrupted with a liquid flow of polysyllables.

"He says," Nikka interpreted, when he had finished, "that he has heard about it. It is just as I told you and Hugh, the tradition is known all through the Balkans. He says that the treasure is concealed in an ancient, palace in Stamboul which has been inhabited longer than men can remember by a tribe of gypsies whose chief is one Teram Tokall. He says there is a rumor amongst the tribes that he, Tokall, is an ally of a group of Frank thieves. There is a tradition in Tokall's tribe that their forefathers believed the treasure ultimately would go to them."

"Will he help us?" I asked eagerly. Nikka gave me an odd look.

"His tribe are mine. My wish is their wish. How can they refuse?"

CHAPTER VII

The Road to Stamboul

Wasso Mikall was a very wise man. He questioned Nikka closely concerning our situation, and this was his verdict:

"When you fight with thieves you must use thieves' tricks. You did right to come to me. Now I will secure fitting garments for you, my sister's son, and for your American friend, Jack. For him also I will brew a dye that will make him as dark as our people, so that men will not turn and stare at him on the road."

"After that I think we had best go away from this place as soon as possible. You have traveled rapidly and shaken off your enemies' pursuit. It is well to take every advantage of an opportunity. We will collect some of my young men who can handle a knife, and go on to Stamboul. All men go to Stamboul, and who will notice a Tziganic band?"

"But it wasn't my thought that you should abandon the affairs of the tribe and come and fight with me," rejoined Nikka.

"Are you not the son of my sister?" rejoined the old gypsy. "If you had not elected to go to Iludra with you, would you not be chief of the band? Do I not stand in your place? Well, then, fight of my eyes, we will do for you all that we may."

Nikka hung me a proud glance as he translated this pledge.

Mikall left us, and Nikka and I secured another hour's sleep. When he returned he was accompanied by a younger edition of himself, who carried two bundles which were disclosed as complete suits of Tziganic dress. He, himself, carried a pot of warm, brown liquid, and he proceeded to apply the salve to us with a small paint-brush. Hair, mustache, face and body were darkened to a mellow brown. The stuff dried quickly, and I was wonderful to pull on the strange garments which Nikka showed me how to adjust, and fasten.

Watch out for Sore, Bleeding Gums! PYORRHEA
forced extraction of these perfect teeth
If your gums are tender, soft or bleed easily, pyorrhea may attack and weaken the root sockets that hold the teeth in place. Often the teeth loosen and fall out or must be pulled because their root support is gone.
The teeth themselves may be white and free from decay but they are not safe from loss unless the gums—protectors of the teeth—are firm and healthy. Care of the gums is fully as important as care of the teeth.
Pyorrhea is a special preparation, formulated for stimulating and hardening the gums and is widely prescribed by dentists. It is sterilized and medicated especially for this purpose. Pyorrhea should be brushed on the gums and teeth daily. While this powder is in itself also a superior cleanser of the teeth, it may be used in connection with any dentifrice desired.
Ask your druggist for Pyorrhea. If he cannot supply you, send his name and $1.00 for first can containing six-month supply. Or send for free sample. Write for free sample of Pyorrhea and booklet on care of the gums.

Evil Reputation of Sargasso Sea Myth

The Sargasso sea is a region of the Atlantic ocean lying off the American coast about the latitude of Florida. It is composed of floating masses of brown seaweed, characterized by numerous small, berry-like bladders. This dense gulf weed (Sargassum bacillifera) is the home of many small marine animals, crabs, prawns, etc. It is supposed that the weed grows on the American coast, is torn away by the waves and washed by the currents round the North Atlantic ocean into the comparatively still waters, where it floats in accumulated masses. The older masses of weed slowly lose their power to float and then sink and perish. Columbus was becalmed in the Sargasso sea, and this made his men despair of ever reaching land.

Wed to Get Clean Shirts

In the course of a trial in Brighton, England, a police court judge asked a man if he never loved his wife why he married her. The accused husband's answer was: "To get a clean shirt." The astounded magistrate sentenced him to do the household washing for one year, and told the aggrieved wife to report to him if the man didn't do a good job. The magistrate's parting remark was: "Now you will have clean shirts."

For a long time this sea had an unfavorable reputation, as it was thought that the ship which was forced into it was doomed. Recent scientific expeditions have demonstrated that ships need have little fear of the masses of weed.

Finding Square of Number

Suppose you desire the square of a certain number, but discover that you have lost the mental power to multiply. How could you find its square?

Begin with one and add as many consecutive odd numbers as there are units in the number to be squared. Suppose you want to find the square of six. Add together the first six odd numbers—1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11. The sum of these is 36, the square of six. The square of seven is equal to the sum of the first seven odd numbers taken consecutively. Likewise the square of ten is equal to the sum of the first ten odd numbers taken consecutively, etc., etc.—Palladium Magazine.

Choni Monastery

Rare Books From Choni in the Library of Congress.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THE monastery and village of Choni, near the Tibetan border of China, which was recently the scene of a massacre by Moslem soldiers, was an outstanding type of the Lama communities that dot western China and Tibet.

The site of Choni is in the south-western part of Kansu Province. Though it was the capital of the domain of the prince of Choni, it was merely a village of 400 families, approximately 2,000 inhabitants. The natives of this region are of Tibetan origin; in fact, there are few real Chinese in the neighborhood. The village was by far the best situated spot in Kansu Province, and the prince's territory was the choicest bit of land. Nowhere else in Kansu are there such forests, and the scenery is unsurpassed.

The village probably changed but little during the six centuries of its existence. The Tao river, which flows a third of a mile below the south gate, furnished the water for the town and the monastery. Women carried the water in wooden buckets to the town, and the poorer monks conveyed it the additional 500 feet to the monastery.

Little of this water was used for cleansing purposes. The monks, therefore, reeked of rancid butter and grease, and their skin was black from the accumulated filth of years. Even lama officials do not bathe, although their faces appear washed. Their priestly garments of red Lhasa cloth are unwashable; and since few of them have more than one garment, the clothing is saturated with odors so strong that it is difficult to expel the scent from a room after even a short visit by a small group of lamas.

Monastery Is Extensive.

Choni monastery or what remains of it is surrounded by a wall of loess (a peculiar deposit of loam) pierced by a large stone gate looking south. Upon the gate is the inscription: Chon Chan Ting Ssu (Restowed by Imperial Command Temple of Abstract Tranquillity). A memorial stone of 1730 records that the tablet for the monastery was written by Emperor K'ang Hsi himself in 1710 as a favor to Chih Lien, a Choni priest, who paid him a visit. After his return to Choni, Chih Lien is said to have contributed 3,000 taels of silver—a great sum at that time—toward the building of temples and chanting halls in the monastery. Within the walls are 172 buildings, not including 10 large and small chanting halls.

During the reign of Yung Lo the monastery housed 3,500 monks, but recently only 700 have resided there. Of the 10 chanting halls in Choni two are fairly large. The one most frequently used faces a square in which the lama dances are performed and the butter festival is celebrated. This hall is flanked by three other buildings.

The largest chanting hall, a structure probably 200 years old, is immediately back of the first. It can accommodate about 400 monks. The roof is supported by 80 large pillars of wood lacquered red. The main hall in this hall is Wutai-shan, or Chuan-yang, the God of Learning (the Chinese Wen Shen, God of Literature).

On festive days this hall was beautifully decorated with brocades. From the ceiling were suspended long ceremonial umbrellas, and the pillars were sheathed in magnificent hand-woven carpets, the gift of the Mongol king of the Ala Shin. The hall was opened only on special occasions, such as the Feast of Lights, when the monks assembled at night to chant the classics.

Complete Set of Tibetan Classics.

A building to the left of the main chanting hall contained a large octagonal prayer cylinder of wood, with doors. Within it was kept a complete set of the Kandrur and Tundjur, the chief Tibetan classics, the former comprising 108 volumes, the latter the commentary—209 volumes. To the cylinder were attached slender bars with carved figures, by means of which the wheel could be set in motion. With one revolution the devotee said the contents of the 317 volumes—indeed a quick way of saying prayers.

Precious possessions of Choni monastery were printing blocks of both the Kandrur and the Tundjur. A number of other lamaseries, such as Derge and Inaba, have blocks of the Kandrur, but rarely of the Tundjur. In fact, Choni is said to have been the only monastery outside Lhasa possessing the Tundjur blocks, and the claim is made that the books printed here are without mistakes, the best edition known.

The printing blocks of both classics were more than 500 years old. It took sixteen years to carve the blocks of the Tundjur alone. The Choni Prince suggested movable type, but the lamas refused to entertain the idea. It took 45 monks three months to print the Kandrur and nearly six months to print the Tundjur. This does not include the time consumed in preparing the paper for the printers.

The paper used is bought at Kung-chung, in eastern Kansu, 11 days distant from Choni. It is very thin, and the monks pasted eight sheets together to make one for the book. When 317 volumes are printed, one can surmise the time and labor spent.

The Library of Congress in Washington, D. C., obtained a complete set of the two classics from the Choni lamas. These were packed in 92 boxes and sent by caravan seven days to Lanchow; thence by parcel post to Shanghai. Unfortunately, they arrived at Shanghai just before the gates of that city closed. There they remained through the whole siege of the town. They did reach Shanghai, however, after being more than a year on the way.

Ceremonial Dances.

Great ceremonies, conducted regularly each year in Choni monastery, were few. There was a dance on the 13th of the first moon; the butter festival was celebrated on the 15th, and another dance was performed on the 16th. The Sunning of the Buddha took place in the spring, on the 30th day of the sixth moon, fell the Old Dance, Chuan-yang-wa, probably the most interesting of all the ceremonies.

There is a dance on the 24th of the 10th moon, followed on the 25th by the Feast of Lights, which commemorates the ascension of Tsongkhapa, with yet another dance on the 26th day. Every third year, on the 16th of the first moon, the Choni lamas celebrate the installation of a new presiding priest by a peculiar festival known as Lo Chon Chuker.

The time between ceremonies was occupied by the monks in chanting on certain days, but otherwise mainly in loafing. In case of illness of wealthy believers, the lamas were asked to chant the classics, believed to have a salutary effect. The charge for opening the largest chanting hall was 300 taels of silver ($200). To expedite the reading of the voluminous works, 500 assembled lamas divided the pages and each read portion of the text—a rather disconnected method, but apparently it matters little if the beginning, middle, and end are read at the same time. It was thus possible to read the 108 volumes of the Kandrur in a day.

Congregation "Fed Up" on Ten Virgins' Sermons

It is still customary in rural districts in Scotland for the minister to preach a series of sermons around one Scripture text. The parable of the Ten Virgins had been selected by an old minister for a series of ten sermons, in which he took one virgin at a time.

Many of the church folks were heartily tired of the subject at the end of a week or two, but it was left to the head to tell the minister the truth.

Asked by the good man as he was disrobing him in the vestry one evening how he was enjoying "my analysis of the characters of the virgins," the head replied brusquely: "The hale congregation's fair sentiment w' them, sir. They mean he a lot o' tough naid moids by this time."—London Tit-Bits.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK

Opportunists

INFECTIONS of the respiratory tract, such as colds and influenza, lend themselves most readily to the commercial opportunists. After all, it is only business for shrewd people to capitalize the ills and misfortunes of others.

It thus happens that when epidemics from these causes arise, as they unfortunately sometimes do, one is treated to an astonishing amount of printed and pictorial matter urging one and all to purchase various super-preventives or sure-cures.

Naturally, the glittering package, glowingly advertised to prevent the then prevailing disease, is particularly appealing. And it is perhaps of some psychological value to have a "preventive" or "sure cure" close at hand. It gives one a sense of protection similar to seeing the life preserver in one's steamship cabin. However, its actual power to do what is claimed for it is not always quite so infallible as one is led to believe.

In case of epidemics the main point is to use ordinary care and protection. This can be accomplished by avoiding as much as possible those who are victims of the disease, by building bodily resistance through plenty of rest, fresh air, exercise, wholesome food and by the daily elimination of wastes.

It must be conceded that in epidemic periods one may contract the disease no matter how carefully and healthily one attempts to live. But certainly one's chances of pulling through unscathed are better with a healthy body without a purchased preventive, than with a sickly body with drug store protection.

Turn into an opportunist by resolving today to obey the laws of healthy existence. Or as the old saying goes, "In times of peace prepare for war." Hunt the opportunists by being one yourself!

The Germ Fiend

IT IS not at all surprising that the germ fiend has at last arrived upon the scene. He is the natural result of the thousands of words which in recent years have been printed concerning the devastating activities of bacteria.

Such a person, over-sensitive in the first place, concludes that everything he touches is likely to be contaminated, and that hosts of germs are on his face and hands waiting to do their worst at the psychological moment. Also, he is always miserable until soap and water have been vigorously applied after every normal contact.

In short, the germ consciousness to him is a painfully predominating one. This unfortunate type of person forgets that we are living in a germ world and that there are good as well as bad organisms. Neither does he appreciate that germs are always fighting to keep the situation in neutral, so to speak; and as a general rule, are very successful at it.

Of course, there are times when such vicious little fellows as the typhoid bacillus, the pneumonia germ, the scarlet fever organism and others get the better of people. But, by and large, the germ world is pretty evenly matched, with a resultant lack of great damage to human beings. It follows that there is no sensible reason for anyone to become habitually overexcited about them.

Use soap and water as a cleansing agent regularly. Employ a germicide for sings, bites and cuts when thus victimized. And always respect the quarantine sign for communicable diseases. But in the main, forget germs. There are already too many germ fiends for comfort either to themselves or to others.

Queer Fishes Found in

Waters of the Earth

There is a small fish called gourami, found in the waters of India, which croaks almost like a frog when on the surface of the water. The angler fish is the "will-o'-the-wisp" of the sea. Its body is camouflaged like seaweed, and it can give off a red light which attracts smaller fish on which the "angler" feeds. The starfish fastens itself to the body it wishes to feed on, turns its stomach inside out, and engulfs its prey with this useful organ. Alaska has a fish which, when dried, can be used as a candle. The eyes of soles and plaice move about their bodies while young. In early days, they swim upright with an eye on each side, but as they begin to swim flat, one eye crosses right over the body, until both eyes are on the same side. In some cases the eye is believed to have passed right through the body. Lobsters masticate their food with their jaws, but they have also sets of teeth in their stomachs, where they complete the work of chewing. The tiniest fish in the world are called "million fish." When fully grown these fish are less than half an inch long, but they are the deadliest enemy of the mosquito, on whose eggs they feed. The waters around Hong Kong have a fish with almost a human looking head, and which gives a cry almost like that of a baby. One species of shark grows to fully 40 feet in length and is quite harmless.

Sailors in Small Boat

Menaced by Albatross

Haunted by an albatross, a bird of ill omen, and in danger of having their boats smashed by a huge whale, were among the experiences of the crew of the Siltanah, a British steamer that caught fire recently hundreds of miles from land in the South Indian ocean. Soon after the cargo of coal caught fire the decks became red hot and the hatches were in flames. The crew took to two small boats and for 44 hours were adrift in a gale. It was during this time that the albatross constantly swooped down menacingly. This story bears a remarkable similarity to the incident in Coleridge's poem, "The Ancient Mariner," in which the albatross, an ominous bird, haunts a stricken ship.

Saving the Shins

All the shin guards are not bought for children performers or baseball catchers. Married men who have to play a lot of bridge with their wives are learning to make use of them. This is a form of preparedness. If there is a kick coming they are ready for it.—Los Angeles Times.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.
